APPENDIX 2 TO CHAPTER 1INCIDENTAL MANNER*Guidance

The Act refers to the provision of investment services 'in an incidental manner' and defines that as 'in the course of and in conjunction with but subordinate to a professional activity other than the provision of any investment business service.'

The language in the Act is derived from the Investment Services Directive which exempts from the scope of the directive, 'persons providing an investment business service where that service is provided in an incidental manner in the course of a professional activity . . . ' (Article 2.2(c))

The Investment Services Directive was promoted in order to require the proper authorisation of persons who provide investment business services. The directive applies to the regulation of investment business firms. The significance of this emphasis is that the exclusion in article 2.2(c) is also directed to 'persons' (firms) rather than to transactions. The Investment Services Directive does not exclude incidental transactions.' It excludes persons who provide investment services, where the provision of that service is incidental to the provision of other professional services.

The focus is therefore on the relationship of the investment service to the professional activity from the standpoint of the authorised member. Thus it is the sum of the individual transactions which is the 'service' which falls to be assessed, and the relationship of that whole service to the professional activity (again taken as a whole) of the authorised member.

In order for an authorised member to qualify as providing investment business services 'in an incidental manner in the course of a professional activity... other than the provision of an investment business service', it will be necessary to be satisfied that

- (a) the main activities of the authorised member are the provision of professional services other than investment business; and
- (b) the provision of the investment services is not isolated from the other activities of the authorised member so that it is in effect a separate business, (this would however not exclude an authorised member operating specialist departments).

The test in (a) above is measurable in quantitative terms. The Financial Regulator has indicated that if less than 20% of total turnover on an annual basis comes from investment business, the quantitative test is satisfied.

Effective from 1st January 2024

However, the test in (b) is not quantitative but relates to the manner in which the services are presented. This is not as easily measured but can be assessed by reference to various indicators. Such indicators include:

1. Does the authorised member fully accept that its provision of investment business service is within the scope of the general ethical code or rules governing the profession?
2. Are the investment services normally provided in conjunction with the main professional activities of the authorised member?
3. Is it the policy of the authorised member to endeavour to provide its full range of services to his clients, where these services are appropriate?
4. In terms of the way the investment services are managed by the authorised member, is it clear that this activity does not act on a stand-alone basis separate from the main activities of the authorised member?
5. Is the provision of investment services managed on a day-to-day basis by persons who are members of an approved professional body?
6. When advertising investment services is it clear to a potential client that the authorised member operates an accountancy practice (or legal firm) which also provides investment services?
7. Are the offices dealing with investment business in the same locations as the offices from which the main professional services are provided?

It would be too simplistic to suggest that a failure against each one (singly) of the above tests would mean that an authorised member's provision of its investment business services could not be in an incidental manner.

Each individual authorised member would require to be assessed by the Approved Professional Body in order to satisfy the body that both legs of the requirement outlined in (a) and (b) above are satisfied. Such Authorised Members would also be governed in the conduct of their investment business by the ethical code of that Professional Body which is applied to professional practice as a whole.

EXPLANATORY NOTES(These notes do not form part of the Regulations)

1. For convenience only, these Regulations have been drafted in terms of the duties imposed on Members. However, disciplinary proceedings can only be brought against members under Article 52 of the Institutes Memorandum & Articles of Association and attention is drawn to that Article.
2. Unless the Authorised Firm agrees otherwise with a client a Client Bank Account should be an interest bearing account if 'material interest' would be likely to accrue and any interest paid must in the absence of such agreement be paid to the client.
3. 'Material Interest' should be deemed to be earned if the sum of money is or is likely to be held for at least the number of weeks shown in the left hand column of the following table and the minimum balance in the Client Bank Account (or credited to the client in the case of an account comprising the money of two or more clients) equals or exceeds the corresponding sum in the right hand column of the Table:

Number of Weeks	Minimum Balance
8	€635
4	€1,270
2	€6,350
1	€12,700

The above is merely a guide to the interpretation of 'material interest' the obligation of the Authorised Firm is to take reasonable steps to ensure that the client does not suffer material loss if money remains on low or non-interest bearing accounts There may be circumstances, for example, where money should be placed on overnight deposit.
